Nurturing the infinite potential of children

The Mission of the Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation is to Improve the Lives of Texas Children.

Founded in 1989 by the Texas Cavaliers, the Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation (TCCF) has established itself as one of our city's preeminent philanthropic partners for children's charities. Over the past 34 years, the TCCF has awarded more than $15 million in grants to carefully vetted organizations that are working diligently to bring healing to the physically and mentally ill, educational opportunities to the underserved, critical services to the marginalized, healthy recreational activities to children of all ability levels, cultural enrichment throughout the city, and so much more.

$15M in Grants in 34 Years!

The non-profit children's organizations we support are at work in innovative, awe-inspiring ways and the Texas Cavaliers are their unwavering advocates and patrons. Each year, our TCCF annual grants have soared, along with the impact of these funds – from $400 awarded in 1989 to a record $2.5 million this fiscal year. Thousands of children's lives are transformed every day by these gifts. The moral landscape of our community has been elevated. Children matter. Every child deserves a chance to live, grow, explore, learn, feel safe, and savor their childhood.

A Record $2.5M to 63 Children's Charities in 2023!

The TCCF has evolved to include hands-on work during the Cavaliers Care Community Service Day – an annual event that gives Cavaliers and their families a chance to participate in the missions and ministries of the charities we support through our dollars. We're forging relationships with our charitable partners, civic leaders, and other funding entities – because working together, we leverage our impact, and ensure a better future for the children we serve.

With every dollar and every volunteer hour the Texas Cavaliers and friends give through the TCCF, we are nurturing the infinite potential of children.

A Record
MILLION to 63 Children's
Charities in 2023!

Thoughts from the President

When I joined the Texas Cavaliers in 1994, our charitable arm was a mere five years young, and yet we were able to award $12,500 to nine children's charities. This year, we were overjoyed to present $2.5 million to 63 worthy charities doing amazing work on behalf of our community's children, which will generate positive reverberations throughout this community for decades to come.

Among the many standouts for me this year is that the TCCF trustees and class representatives embarked on a campaign to forge deeper relationships with the organizations we serve. We are making concerted visits to witness firsthand the phenomenal work of our charitable partners and we are getting to know the selfless and innovative leaders and their dedicated staffs. To further enrich these relationships, over 250 Cavaliers, wives and children spanned out into all 10 City Council Districts for the annual Cavaliers Care Community Service Day where we rolled up our sleeves and made meaningful personal connections. It is inspirational for us to work alongside the wonderful people who are giving of themselves to help our city's kids.

The Texas Cavaliers has been a prominent fraternal organization since 1926, and that solid foundation of fellowship and genuine relationships has led us to this expanded path as a recognized and respected philanthropic resource dedicated to helping children. This past year, the City Council reached out to us in partnership to help with a citywide children's learning project. We have joined with other prominent benefactors, including our friend Susan Naylor, and The Coates and Betty Stieren Kelso Foundations, to increase the impact of our giving. We vet every request with renewed discretion to ensure the greatest results for your charitable dollars. Your investments through the TCCF are prudent and powerful. Our grants are truly changing lives.

Our organization has grown light years, and I believe our founding brothers would be proud to see how this society of business and community leaders has also become a champion for children in need. To continue and expand on this good work, the TCCF Trustees are committed to increasing our endowment with the generosity of Cavaliers and others in the community who recognize the importance of our mission.

We especially celebrate the extraordinary force that brings us together as both a social organization and as an advocate for children's causes – our community's favorite party – the Texas Cavaliers River Parade. This year's Parade Marshal Greg Seay and his team of officers, chairmen and assistant chairmen delivered another fantastic event that is the lifeblood of our charitable giving, and we are deeply grateful.

Now in its 34th year, the TCCF continues to flourish and exert a positive influence on the health and well-being of children. San Antonio has a unique cultural identity of people who work together as family and want to help each other. The Texas Cavaliers and TCCF offer an excellent example of that spirit. Your gifts fuel our mission, and by increasing the Foundation's corpus, you are generating remarkable transformation. I am sincerely thankful for each of you.

Jeff C. Bailey – President, Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation

King Antonio C

Clyde Johnson IV

I am writing to share my enormous gratitude and to reflect on my extraordinary journey as King Antonio C, the 100th, during Fiesta's spring celebration. The experience was an honor and a privilege that will forever remain etched in my heart and memory.

Back in 1997, when my father, Clyde Johnson III, had the esteemed title of King Antonio LXXV, I was able to witness firsthand the magic that surrounds Fiesta and the joy it brings to the community. The spark ignited in me during that time, and while I didn't anticipate becoming King Antonio myself, I always carried the seed of appreciation for the event's enchantment and the positive impact it has on our community, especially our children.

When my investiture came around this past spring, and I was crowned King Antonio C, I grasped the true significance of this role. It's not about the individual wearing the suit, but rather the symbol it represents – hope, fun, community spirit, and above all, a commitment to the children's charities that we strive to support through the Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation.

The whirlwind of 244 events in just 14 days was a blur, but the overarching memory is one of joy. Witnessing the happiness in the eyes of children and knowing that we, as Cavaliers, played a role in bringing the community together to celebrate our rich cultural heritage was an incredible feeling. Our duty as royalty was to spread merriment, and it was an honor to fulfill that role.

The pinnacle of our efforts was the distribution of $2.5 million in checks to 63 charities. However, it goes beyond the financial aspect. We visited these organizations to truly understand the invaluable services they provide to children. We acted as a megaphone for the good they're doing, and during the River Parade telecast, KSAT shone a spotlight on many of our charities, providing them with priceless publicity. Our meticulous vetting process and the grants we awarded represent a reliable vote of confidence to other potential funders.

Fiesta and the River Parade were nothing short of glorious. I owe a debt of gratitude to my Castle – the Cavaliers and their wives who stood by me every step of those busy 14 days. A special thank you to my Commander Scott Christy and Emily; Day Aide Chris Petty and Emilie; Executive Aide Meade Flavin and Jolie; and Night Aide McCann Northington and Margye. I also wish to express my appreciation to my predecessor, King Antonio XCIX Barton Simpson. Lastly, immense thanks to my lovely wife, Kim, for her unwavering love and patience throughout this incredible journey.

Viva Fiesta!

Rise Recovery and Rise Inspire Academy

They don't punish kids who relapse; they wrap them in support.

Drug and alcohol use among teens is an epidemic. The National Center for Drug Abuse Statistics reports that one in eight teenagers abused an illicit substance in the last year. Drug use among 8th graders soared to 61% between 2016 and 2020. At least 62% of teenagers in 12th grade have abused alcohol. Some 50% of teenagers have misused a drug at least once. In Texas, an estimated 162,000 youth have a substance use disorder (SUD).

Rise Recovery is committed to a formidable mission: To help teens, young adults and families overcome the effects of drugs and alcohol and partner with the community in education and prevention. Their work over the past 45 years is saving lives, restoring hope and productivity, and helping to avoid the costly consequences of SUD – emergency services, homelessness, institutionalization, and criminal justice involvement.

Their collective, compassionate, trailblazing programs are focused entirely on recovery. Successful recovery re-engages young people into their families, schools, and communities in a healthy, positive way.

Drug and alcohol use is incompatible with education, resulting in high drop-out rates among teens with SUD. Rise Recovery created an innovative solution on their campus – Rise Inspire Academy – a new charter high school for kids recovering from drug and alcohol abuse. Inspire Academies provides the curriculum and Rise Recovery provides recovery supports. The school opened in 2022 with the help of the Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation, which honored Rise Recovery as its designated charity in 2023 with a $500,000 grant.

Evita Morin, Executive Director, explains the unique concept: “If a student stumbles and relapses, instead of the punitive measures they would find in most schools, we wrap support around them. We see that they get treatment. We make sure they stay in school. They do not get lost in the cracks or expelled.”

The school celebrated its first graduating class in 2023 – seven seniors. “None of these kids would have graduated if it weren't for this school,” Evita says. Now they're discussing the future of Rise Inspire Academy – sports teams, a prom, and alternative celebrations to those that often involve drugs and alcohol.

Rise Inspire Academy is the latest in a series of initiatives to help youth “say yes to recovery.” Rise Recovery also works in 13 school districts – public and charter – applying an early intervention approach that eliminates barriers and involves parents and educators.

Their programs recognize mental health issues that include eating disorders and suicidal thoughts. “We are not afraid to talk to kids who are using,” Evita says. Education is one of their primary goals, and includes frank, fearless conversations that broach topics like Fentanyl. They host space on their campus for recovery services, and partner with others in a robust referral program.

The organization has created an unusual, youth-driven program where kids are inspired to assume leadership roles and take control of the rampant problems they see at their schools. Some are going to their school boards and asking for help. Others are enlisting peers to join them in recovery. “The miracle isn’t helping one kid. It’s that they’re bringing friends to our meetings. Other kids see something in a strong kid who has chosen recovery, and they want it, too,” she says.

In the meantime, with support from the Texas Cavaliers, they’re doing what they’ve done for 45 years (Rise Recovery, launched in 2015, was formerly known as the Palmer Drug Abuse Program). “We don’t turn anyone away,” she says. Last year they served 175 kids in their in-school programs and over 500 parents, siblings, and other loved ones.

A 2023 Grant Recipient Spina Bifida Texas

Connecting teen designers and disabled models ... it's totally FashionABLE!

Spina bifida is a heartbreaking birth defect that inflicts its damage before a woman even knows she is pregnant. The baby's spine does not fully close, resulting in a lifetime of disabilities. Some children use a wheelchair. Some use a walker. They suffer from incontinence and hydrocephalus. An estimated 1,400 children are born every year in the U.S. with spina bifida.

Rosanne Gonzales, Executive Director of Spina Bifida Texas, knows too well how spina bifida affects a child and his family. Her son Michael, now 20 years old, was born with spina bifida, and like most parents, she was shocked and unprepared. It is now her mission to help others through programs and services that ease the burdens of the afflicted and their families, and through education to mothers-to-be on the benefits of folic acid as a preventive measure before and during pregnancy.

The extensive list of services this small non-profit produces is impressive – especially considering that the pandemic nearly shuttered their doors and reduced their staff to one – Rosanne. They offer assistance to new parents, a resource library, self-advocacy support, a lending closet for medical supplies, and other services.

One of their most innovative projects is FashionABLE – an annual fashion show with designs created by local high school students. The event introduces models – children and teens with different disabilities – to aspiring young designers – and kindles an inspirational spark in both.

The design students are touched by the stories of their models – the trials and obstacles they face in simply getting dressed each day. What happens after those conversations? Pure magic. The students no longer see the disability. They see a friend who needs their creative help, and they produce adaptive outfits that simplify the task of dressing. As teens, they also understand the importance of wanting to look cool, and they design accordingly.

Once the outfits are complete, the models put on a FashionABLE show at participating high schools. New York Fashion Week has nothing on this event!

The first year, 2008, the scope was small but mighty – resulting in eight outfits for the elated models. Now, design students compete to participate and the festive outcome this year: 28 glowing models showed off 32 creatively adapted garments on the runways. “The child with a disability feels like a star. No limitations. The clothes fit and they’re beautiful,” Rosanne says. The event also is spawning what may become a new generation of clothing designers who are attuned to the needs of the disabled. One of the designers, who won a scholarship to University of the Incarnate Word, has plans for creating a line of adaptive clothing when she becomes a professional designer.

“Since 2017, TCCF grants have covered all our costs – the fabric, notions, space rental, etc., and we are so grateful. This is an amazing event, and we owe the success to our friends the Texas Cavaliers,” Rosanne says.

63 Partners Nurturing Children's Infinite Potential

All it takes is a visit to believe in the missions of the 63 charitable partners the TCCF is supporting with its grants. Talk to the parents, observe the staff working with the children, and you grasp the consequential role each of these organizations plays in nurturing the infinite potential of our community's infants, children and young people. Their work addresses root causes, serves the marginalized, prevents and heals, and helps innocent children overcome the effects of poverty, disability, chronic illness, abuse, and abandonment. These heroes are strengthening children and families and making our community a kinder, safer, more generous, and compassionate place to live. We are honored to partner with them in their unstinting altruism.

"The Texas Cavaliers Charitable Foundation has provided important support to the San Antonio Young Women's Leadership Academy. Donations have been critical for the success of the school's laptop project – vital in a college preparatory environment, and fueled the Electbots, the all-girl robotics team. The Cavaliers are recognized for their thorough vetting process, opening doors for the Academy with other donors because of their stamp of approval. We are honored and grateful."

"We are so grateful for the support and caring that the Texas Cavaliers have extended on behalf of our grieving children for so many years. What a blessing they have been in helping us bring counseling and comfort to Uvalde children and families. The wonderful Toyota van that the Foundation donated enabled our counselors to commute to Uvalde daily just after the tragedy, and now serves as an essential vehicle for outreach in that community. The hundreds of new school shoes for financially stressed families and the trip to the 2023 River Parade brought smiles on faces that had seen far too many tears. We are blessed and so grateful for the caring hearts and good work of the Texas Cavaliers."

Viva Fiesta! Viva the River Parade!

Much of the enchantment of Fiesta happens at the Texas Cavaliers River Parade. It is here our King Antonio C Clyde Johnson IV, his royal court, and countless volunteers and sponsors brought the city together in festive celebration. It is here we honor our grant recipients and raise funds to continue lending them invaluable support. Our deep gratitude to all who are involved in this spectacular event, and a round of applause for our sponsors.

The Citywide Art Contest nurtures the talents of thousands of young artists every year by awarding prizes to a winner in each City Council District, along with an at-large winner. The winners' teachers get cash awards to purchase art supplies for their classrooms. The contest theme centers on the River Parade, with "Fantastic Voyages" guiding the artists' creativity in 2023. Many thanks to our sponsors, Bank of America and Emily Ann's Family Foundation.
